TWO BELGIANS TO FOREFRONT

In the Socialist Movement
in Their Own Native Land.

BRUSSELS, May 2.—Two men have come to the forefront in public attention as a result of the recent political strike in Belgium, each adding to his popularity and his record as a successful Socialist leader. They are men of widely divergent characteristics, Emile Vandervelde, the gifted and brilliant intellectual, and Edward Anseele, the youthful enthusiast, and each in his particular field contributed materially to the measurable progress made in the last month toward manhood suffrage in Belgium.

Vandervelde who has led the Socialists of this country since the death of Jean Volders, is approaching his fiftieth birthday. In his youth he studied law, but his interest in social questions prevented his practicing. He is possessed of high literary gifts, a wide knowledge, and is an able statesman. Of markedly pale complexion, slightly aquiline nose, and penetrating eyes, Vandervelde's face once seen is rarely forgotten. He was elected to the Chamber of Deputies in 1894, and rapidly distinguished himself by his eloquence and intellectual superiority. As a speaker he is remarkable for his distinct utterance, the preciseness and clearness of his thought and the logic of his reasoning. He is a magnificent debater, never losing his temper, and keeping his head in the most difficult situations.

Vandervelde's reasons for belonging to the Socialist party are rather those of the head than the heart. His convictions are purely intellectual. He is, and always has been, a determined opponent of the recent general strike, which he believes will only delay the triumph of the cause of Socialism. But the majority of the party having pronounced in favor of the strike, Vandervelde bowed to the decision and co-operated in the common work to the best of his ability.

The other Socialist leader, Edward Anseele, founder of the "Vooruit," of Ghent, presents a striking contrast in every way to Vandervelde. Open and engaging countenance, possessed of a warm and vibrant voice, Anseele charms all who come in contact with him. He is an excellent speaker, using a wealth of imagery to convey his meaning, which he further forces with vigorous gestures. Possessing no personal means he lives on his deputy's salary of $800 a year and an income of $416, which he gets as a director of the "Vooruit." He contributes nearly half this small revenue to the Socialist cause.

Unlike Vandervelde, Anseele is a working man and the son of a working man. He has known the world's rough hand. His father was a shoemaker, but wanting earnestly to give his son some education, he labored with extreme self-renunciation to this end. Young Anseele was employed in turn by an architect, a seedman, a cloth merchant. One evening he entered a Socialist meeting and was so profoundly impressed by the picture of the misery of the people drawn by the speaker, that he at once enrolled himself in the ranks of the "International." The next day, having confided his new political views to his employer, he was summarily dismissed. Not daring to show himself to his father, he ran away to Antwerp, whence he worked his way to London. During six months he wandered about the British capital often sleeping under the bridges. He tried to enlist in the army, but was rejected on account of lack of inches.

Eventually the young man returned to Ghent, where he became a printer. In association with others he organized a co-operative bakery. This was the beginning of the "Vooruit," now famous throughout Belgium. "Vooruit" is a Flemish word meaning "forward," and it has become the rallying cry of the Socialists of Ghent. The organization, which at the end of its first year, counted only 500 members, now has over 10,000, and it owns warehouses and other buildings valued at $100,000.

GRATITUDE

is Expressed by Secretary Arnold for the State Association.

A. T. Arnold, of Wheeling, general secretary of the West Virginia Sunday School Association, has issued the following signed letter of appreciation of the convention and himself for the entertainment Clarksburg recently gave the association in annual convention here:

Greeting:
As secretary of the state Sunday School Association, I desire to express my heartfelt appreciation and thanks to the citizens of Clarksburg who came so heroically to our rescue and took care of 1,000 persons, who attended the state Sunday school convention, with only two weeks' notice and helped us make it the greatest convention in the history of our association.

The convention expressed its gratitude in the following resolution:

Resolved, that the thanks of this convention are due and are most cordially tendered to the citizens of Clarksburg for their unique and unexampled generosity in entertaining the convention without any reasonable time for preparation and with such gratifying success.

Our special acknowledgments are gratefully made to the general local committee for its able and careful service, to the homes of the city so hospitably opened for our entertainment, to the press for generous treatment in reporting the sessions of the convention, to the boys who have so eagerly served as pages and to all others who in any way have contributed to the comfort of the delegates and the exceptional success of the meetings.

These remarkable courtesies will long remain in the minds and hearts of all of us.

Adopted at the state Sunday school convention at Clarksburg, W. Va., on April 25, 1913.

A. T. ARNOLD.

HEIRS

Residing in America Seek Their Shares of Estates in England.

LONDON, May 2.—The American embassy has been so overwhelmed lately by requests from America by heirs who believe that they have enormous estates in chancery in England that it has become necessary to adopt a printed form for the replies to these communications.

The only thing the embassy is permitted to do in the matter is to suggest a competent legal adviser to investigate the case. It cannot itself conduct the investigations. It does, however, tell inquirers that there are no large unclaimed estates in Great Britain. The vast sums constantly spoken of as dormant in chancery or awaiting claimants in the Bank of England are purely imaginary and, according to the embassy, are too often the invention of swindlers who obtain money for the prosecution of fictitious claims to these fictitious fortunes.

The funds in chancery open to claim are few, and averages less than $1,800 each, two only approaching $75,000. Most of them would consume their own value in the cost of recovery. The fullest proof of genealogy is demanded, and the lack of data in the United States for this purpose make the process very expensive. Furthermore, as the passage of twenty years and sometimes less bars recovery under the English statutes of limitations, the chance of picking up an estate in chancery is exceedingly small.

GRADING

Is Begun on the Projected Traction Line to Town of Lumberport.

Grading for the traction line to be constructed between Haywood on the Fairmont interurban line and Lumberport, a distance of two miles, has been commenced by the contractors on the Haywood end. It is the intention of the officials of the company to get this line completed within the next few months and before fall weather sets in.

How Another Women Joined the Hoosier Club.

Mrs. L. — using a Hoosier Cabinet finished her work and is reading the Telegram.

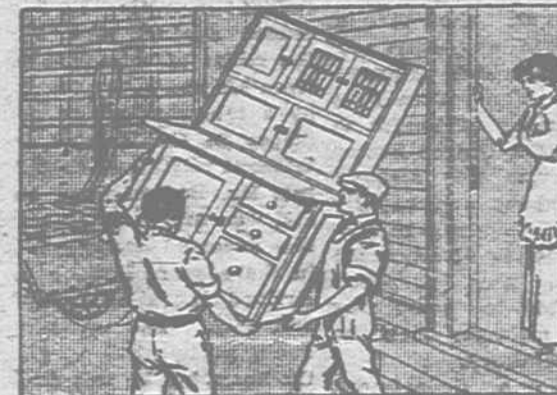

She sees that a few club memberships are left and decides immediately to go tell her friend, Mrs. R., who had been lamenting over the 'phone about her tired feet from so much work to do.

Mrs. L. — finds Mrs. R., in her kitchen tired out — work unfinished — pots and pans scattered everywhere. "Do you know you can still join the Hoosier Club and have a Hoosier today?" exclaimed Mrs. L. "Put on your hat! Never mind dishes! We must get there before all memberships are taken."

Arrived at the store, Mrs. R. learned for the first time, of all the marvelous special and exclusive features that make the Hoosier an unequalled labor-saving machine. "I want to join the club," she said. She found the club privilege cost her nothing. And she was delighted that she had come in time, for the list was nearly full.

That afternoon the Hoosier was placed carefully in her kitchen, ready for her utensils and groceries. Mind you, she had paid only a single dollar of the cabinet's value, and here is her Hoosier ready to save her miles of steps by putting an end to her needless walking.

Next day Mrs. R. finished her work one hour sooner, and hastened to 'phone Mrs. L. — "I don't know how I got along before. Why everything is at my fingers' ends.
